Bruce,

My dissertation is on a floppy disc, which no computer will currently read.... I think the only solution for mine is ProQuest. I will ask around to see if any of the faculty still have electronic versions they can send to you.

I am attaching a couple of posters that were recently done by faculty and me. Please let me know if this is helpful. I am also attaching slide shows I presented at a couple of conferences. If you can't use them, that's fine.

Take care,
Karen

Karen,

So happy for your response, and your pre-planning to attend this seminar. Consider yourself officially registered!

We are researching various means of obtaining dissertations, and dealing with the rights management issues. We have three dissertations lined up thus far, and will be depositing them in our repository within the next few workdays.

We would love to have your dissertation, and any we can obtain from your nursing faculty colleagues. Lauren, as our resident copyright expert, is taking the lead on these access/rights questions, so I am copying her on this email. Our new evening library staff person, Andrew (Andy) Jones, is assisting in this effort. He is a scholar in his own right, and is quickly coming up to speed so he can provide us assistance with the repository.

Bruce

Hi Bruce,
I already had it on my calendar and plan to be there 😊
As a side note, are you able to obtain our dissertations from ProQuest for the repository?
Thanks,
Karen

Subject: Institutional Repository and Open Access seminar - Wednesday, Oct. 22

I wish to extend an invitation to MNU faculty and staff to attend an upcoming seminar on the topic of institutional repositories and open access publishing. This valuable seminar will feature expert guest presenters, and is sponsored by the Faculty Development Committee, the MNU Marketing Department, and Mabee Library.

- Presentation by Dr. Marc Greenberg, Department Chair, Germanic Languages & Literatures – an experienced researcher and advocate of open access publishing
- Presentation by Ada Emmett, Head, Office of Scholarly Communication & Copyright, KU Libraries, who manages KU's "ScholarWorks" – their highly-regarded institutional repository

- Presentation by a representative of the Wesleyan-Holiness Digital Library (WHDL) – the publishing platform for the MNU Institutional Repository (pending confirmation)
- The “world premier” and demonstration of the “alpha” version of the MNU Institutional Repository, with its initial MNU faculty and student content
- An opportunity for your questions about open access publishing and institutional repository access to scholarship

Seminar details:

- Wednesday, Oct. 22, 12:00-1:30pm (come at noon, but leave early if you have other commitments)
- Fireside Room, Campus Center
- Yes, there is such a thing as a free lunch! Free Campus Center cafeteria lunch to the first 50 faculty and staff members who register for this event (courtesy of the Faculty Development Committee)
- Free registration – to register, simply respond to this email!

We anticipate that this important continuing education event will fill up, and space is limited in the Fireside Room, so please register as soon as possible to be assured of a free lunch and a seat at the seminar.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thank you,
